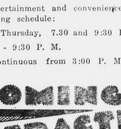
G.I. JIVE

You can't report on high school fashions without mentioning the way the wolves and witches are scrambling ex-service duds with their own clothes these days. Blame it on the shortages of civvies where the boys are concerned, and blame it on the fad for wearing almost anything that belongs to the guy friend where the girls are concerned. Here are some of the G.I.s that are having a successful postwar career:

Bell Bottom Business—He's wearing his bell-bottom trousers with regular shirts and ties or sports shirts. They make slick slacks.



Dye Stuff — Girls are dyeing their O. A. O.'s Eisenhower battle jackets in high shades and wearing them as sports jackets with shorts and slacks. So THIS is the army!

Khaki Whacky — You see boys mixing khaki shirts with their cords or sports slacks; you see their gal-friends wearing them with jeans. Hi, dad, here's your chance to get your precious white shirts back while daughter's not looking!

Accessories in Action — Don't think she shrouds her head in a black kerchief because her brains are dead. It's because her O. A. O. was a sailor and it's considered sharp to wear his kerchief as a babushka.

* * *

Jabberwocky and Jive

Shangri-Laaa!—Ruff, ruff, to you.

Gilda-a-a! — More of the same, from the movie of the same name. Hi, Rita, how's Hayworth?

Have a Shovel — What you say to a person who's s-mearing it on a little too thick.

That's a Yoke, Son, Fry It! — Means the same as "I popped a corny" or "That was a witty one."

Foxey Trotter—A good dancer.

Frantic — Another adjective that denotes superlative quality. It's many degrees above "sharp."

Raunchy—Drippy.

Well, as the elevator man said when he made a bet, "I'll take you up on that one."
